People to People Program
Please note that this special Cuba People-to-People educational exchange program will be different from other programs on which you may have previously participated with Air Journey. It is essential to follow the general license requirements issued by the U.S. Department of Treasury Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) for such people-to-people educational exchange trips, as dictated by U.S. law. All participants of this Journey are required to adhere to the pre-planned schedule of people-to-people activities. Deviation from this itinerary, even in part, is not permitted. Per OFAC general license requirements, this is a full-time program, and there will be little or no free time on the program.

As an authorized traveler under the OFAC general license, you are obligated to comply with certain requirements and maintain detailed records of all your activities and expenses while in Cuba for a period of 5 years.

Changes to Itinerary
This is a once in a lifetime opportunity to visit a country that has been inaccessible to Americans for a long time. Specific inclusions of our itinerary are dependent on outside factors and host availability; therefore, there may be changes to the original itinerary but will uphold the same level of interest and be of equal relevance. Things work differently in Cuba and some activities may become unavailable for a number of different reasons. Therefore, flexibility and an open mind are key in having the best possible experience.

Cuba Hotels
Air Journey promises the use of the best available hotels all over the world, but hotels of this caliber are rarely found in Cuba. The island has limited resources, and although changes are being made, power outages are not uncommon, air-conditioning may not always work properly and plumbing pressure may pose a problem. Be assured that Air Journey believes that the hotels featured on this program are the very best accommodations available – clean, comfortable and with a friendly staff.
